SEPTA moves forward with plans to renovate

Concourses. SEPTA will sign a 30-year lease to repair and clean many of the city's underground transit concourses.

SEPTA's plan to rehabilitate many of the underground transit concourses in Center City got the go-ahead to move forward.

The concourses, which are owned by the city, will be leased by SEPTA for the next 30 years. The agency is expected to sign the lease this week.

The plan, according to Deputy General Manager Jeffrey D. Knueppel, could be extremely drastic in some areas..

"I think there is a very special opportunity to do something on the South Broad concourse, which is south of City Hall going down to Spruce Street," he said. "It's a very big area. ... We could create almost an underground park."

SEPTA will be in charge of cleaning, repairing and maintaining the almost four miles of underground concourse space. Knueppel said they will add lighting, cameras and walkways as well as repairing leaks. SEPTA also plans to replace three escalators and an elevator at 15th and 8th Street station.

Since 2007 the Center City District has cleaned the concourses.

After the state passed the transportation-funding bill SEPTA made plans to spend hundreds of millions over the course of the next few years on its infrastructure.

By the numbers

$29M

Concourse repairs are projected to cost $29 million over five years.

$7M

There is $7 million allotted for the elevators and escalators.

Quoted

"I'm still not sure that all of the stations down there are coming to us. ... but the entire concourse network that comes to us under this lease for maintenance we will improve." Knueppel

Cops: Woman left her two children in car

Marren Mantee, 37, was charged Thursday with leaving her 5-month-old and 7-year-old children in an unlocked Lexus SUV to go shopping at the Upper Darby Acme on Landsdowne Ave at 11 p.m. on Wednesday, reports say.

A passerby called police after hearing the infant crying.

Police arrived and were able to calm the 5-month-old, while the 7-year-old was reportedly asleep and sweating profusely.

Mantee was charged with reckless endangerment. METRO

Police search for missing woman

Police are seeking a 30-year-old woman missing since Wednesday.

Lauren Guzzi, 30, was last seen Wednesday at 4 p.m. at her home on the 200 block of S. 6th Street, police said.

Guzzi suffers from depression and may be in need of medication, police said.

Guzzi was described as 5-foot-5 and 105 pounds, with a thin build, brown eyes and shoulder-length wavy brown hair.

Anyone with information about Guzzi is being asked to call Central Detectives at 215-686-3093/3094 or 911. METRO

Schools. New funding plan needs state OK

Council President Darrell Clark introduced a plan Thursday that would generate millions of dollars for schools, but it may be doomed from the start.

Clarke proposed a plan to reserve 1 percent of the city's sales tax, about $120 million, to help fund the school district and the city's pension fund.

Schools would see the entire $120 million this year, but split it with the pension fund gradually in future years.

The mayor and schools superintendent William Hite both expressed hesitancy to send it to state lawmakers, who have been unwilling to enact similar attempts. METRO

Tulpehocken

SEPTA officials warn parkers

For those who have trouble moving in and out of Tulpehocken Station in Germantown, SEPTA General Manager Joe Casey said help is on the way.

Some riders complained recently that rules banning overnight and general parking on both sides of the driveway are never enforced and therefore causes congestion and could potentially be dangerous.

Casey said because parking fees are not required, enforcement crews do not service or patrol the lot.

"Beginning this week," Casey said, "We will place notices on those cars parking along the entrance/exit driveway and advise them that parking in these areas is prohibited." METRO

Buried alive

Camden woman was buried alive, reports say

A landscaper and his friend were charged Thursday in the death of Fatima Perez, 41, of Monroe Township, New Jersey, who reportedly went missing Monday and was discovered buried on Wednesday.

Landscaper Carlos Alicea-Antonetti told police he argued with Perez while driving in his van to where she intended to buy a car, and she fell out of the van, reports say.

Alicea-Antonetti, police said, then put her in the back of the van and then picked up his friend Ramon Ortiz.

Ortiz then helped duct-tape her eyes and mouth shut and dig a hole in a wooded area and tossed the conscious Perez inside. METRO

A mural to age with times and the trains

Natural presence. The newest Mural Arts project, stretching five miles along SEPTA train tracks, will decay with time.

A SEPTA train passes in front of a "psychylustro" piece. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Train-rider's dreary view of decaying buildings along SEPTA train tracks from 30th Street to North Philadelphia station will change radically with the addition of psychedelic visuals.

The final drops were spread Thursday on "psychylustro," the groundbreaking train corridor mural project by Berlin-based artist Katharina Grosse.

"She's not a traditional muralist," said mural curator Liz Thomas. "We were very interested in something that would be just one of the many layers."

Unlike most murals, "psychylustro" isn't on a flat surface, and it isn't meant to last.

Grosse intentionally used "indoor paints" that will gradually fade with changes in time and weather, Thomas said.

"We will be able to see evidence of the passage of time more clearly as decay and development occur," Thomas said.

About the artist

Expanding minds with visuals

The title "psychylustro" combines the word "psych," which means mental, with "lustro," which means reflection of light.

Grosse calls herself a non-representational, non-narrative artist who has experimented with bringing rocks and plants into her studio.

Her project calls for paintings along the sides of buildings bordering the train tracks, which range from bright, neon-colored organic shapes to vegetative imagery.

Abusive. Hoarder's murder trial closes

Crime-scene photographs taken May 6, 2012 of the Northeast Philadelphia home on the 3300 block of Fairdale Road where Linda Raudenbush, 57, was shot to death, show a living room filled with piles of boxes, spiral notebooks, TVs, garbage bags, empty plastic Ocean Spray juice containers, soiled sheets, and a Winnie the Pooh pillow.

In the pictures, Bohdan "Bob" Chac, Raudenbush's common-law husband, sits in a bright-green Phillies shirt with an empty expression and speckles of blood on his forehead.

Prosecutors say Chac, who is paralyzed on the left side of his body due to a stroke and requires a wheelchair to move, was in roughly the same location when he pointed a black CZ75 handgun chambered with 9mm Luger bullets at Raudenbush, who was standing at the bottom of the staircase. He fired three times, striking the ribs in her upper left torso, killing her.

The handgun was one of dozens of arms that Chac reportedly owned, including about 15 rifles.

Retired Det. Joseph McDermott, who investigated the case, said that Chac claimed he was asleep and that Raudenbush did it herself, but just stopped talking when asked why Raudenbush's daughter, who was in the house, said they were arguing and that he shot her.

The trial concluded Thursday and closing arguments are scheduled for Friday morning.

Thousands evacuated from Calif. wildfires

San Diego county. California Gov. Jerry Brown has declared a state of emergency.

Wildfires were raging in southern California on Thursday, keeping thousands of residents and students away from their homes after San Diego county officials maintained evacuation advisories.

Whipped by the wind, flames swept over the parched land close to homes and roads in nine fires across the county, with black smoke filling the sky as California entered the height of wildfire season in the midst of one of the state's worst droughts.

A blaze in San Marcos that erupted on Wednesday prompted officials to issue evacuation notices for thousands of residents and students at a California State University campus.

The university, which has more than 9,000 students, said on Thursday its evacuation orders would remain through Friday and it had canceled commencement ceremonies.

"The fire was right above campus. I could see it reaching over part of the hill, this really dark smoke. It was almost like an explosion," Grant Rapoza, 19, told Reuters.

The San Marcos fire has burned 700 acres, destroying at least three buildings, the San Diego County emergency website said on Thursday. REUTERS

Five more recalls

GM recalls almost 3 million vehicles

General Motors Co. said on Thursday it has issued five more recalls, covering almost 3 million vehicles globally, and is expected to take a charge of up to $200 million.

Still dealing with fallout from the recall of defective ignition switches linked to at least 13 deaths, the automaker said the largest of the latest recalls covers more than 2.7 million cars for tail lamp malfunctions, including the Chevrolet Malibu, Pontiac G6 and Saturn Aura cars.

The other four recalls cover Malibu, Chevy Corvette sports cars, Cadillac CTS sedans and full-size trucks and SUVs. Most of the vehicles were sold in the United States.

GM said the actions were a result of a sharper focus on safety. REUTERS

9/11. Obama opens museum as a 'sacred place of healing and hope'

President Barack Obama led an emotional dedication on Thursday of a museum that commemorates the traumatic events of Sept. 11, 2001, built on the Ground Zero site of the twin towers that fell that day.

Obama and his wife, Michelle — joined by Bill and Hillary Clinton and former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg — toured the museum, which includes artifacts from many of the nearly 3,000 people who died in the hijacked-plane attacks in New York, Washington and Shanksville, Pennsylvania.

The ceremony was held in a cavernous, underground hall where what remains of the foundation of the twin World Trade Center towers can still be seen, along with a retaining wall that survived the blasts.

In the center of the room, a 36-foot-high column covered with posters of those missing after 9/11 and names of units of fire and emergency workers who died responding to the tragedy.

President Barack Obama looks at the pictures of 9/11 victims.

Quoted

"Here we tell their story so that generations yet unborn will never forget." Obama

Obama singled out 9/11 victim Welles Crowther, a 24-year-old equities trader known simply as a man wearing a red bandana who saved a dozen lives on the South Tower's 78th floor. His body was recovered at Ground Zero in 2002.

A red bandana of the type he wore that day is displayed at the museum, donated by his mother, Allison, who spoke at the ceremony along with Ling Young, a woman Welles led out of the building.

Also on display is the charred watch worn by Todd Beamer, the software salesman who led a passenger revolt against the hijackers on United Airlines flight 93 before it crashed into a field near Shanksville. REUTERS

TOM FOREMAN

FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

CNN=POLITICS

SORRY, I'M BOOKED

My house has books on tables, on shelves and next to the bed. Books slide across the kitchen counter, cascade down the stairs and tumble from closets. My wife says I collect books faster than I read them and for no good reason, but I think she's just jealous of my immense knowledge.

That said, as I assemble my summer reading list, here are some books I would dearly love to see on the racks.

"On Second Thought, No Comment," by Donald Sterling. The former businessman, raconteur and master of human relations shares his formula for balancing business, basketball and family life in a world where, "Dammit, no one understands me!"

"Don't Count Those Chickens," by Hillary Clinton. How do you fail to win the White House when millions of people are practically lining up to give you the victory? "I don't know, but I did it before!" the former Secretary of State says. Two thumbs up!

"Same Act – Different Year!" by John Boehner. The irrepressible "Orange Man" of Capitol Hill passes on his keys to scaring women, young people and immigrants, yet still acting puzzled when voters have trouble warming up to your party.

"Congress? Who Needs It?" by Barack Obama. He's a much admired president, except among more than half the population that, like McKayla, is not impressed. But readers will be thrilled by his daring escapades, as he tells the rest of elected government "Head to the showers. I've got this!"

"Joe's Big Backyard BBQ," by Joe Biden. As a vice president whose own party is hardly interested in seeing him as a candidate, the always cheerful Joe has spent his time working up some great recipes for burgers, ribs and pork, all slathered in his tangy secret sauce.

I'd buy these books. But I'm sure instead D.C. politicos will turn out more volumes on how to restore our democracy, revitalize the economy and make government work. And I'm just not in the mood for more comedy right now.

2012 shooting

Ex-NFL star charged in double murder

Former National Football League star Aaron Hernandez has been charged with murder in connection with the July 2012 shooting of two men in Boston, Suffolk County District Attorney Daniel Conley said on Thursday.

The former tight end for the New England Patriots is already in jail awaiting trial on charges he and two accomplices shot a man to death last June.

Conley said of the new charges that Hernandez used a handgun to "ambush and execute" Daniel Abreu and Safiro Furtado, two Cape Verdean nationals, after they had a chance meeting at a Boston night club and were driving home on July 16, 2012.

"Unbeknownst to them, Hernandez followed them traveling in an SUV. When the victims' car stopped at a red light ... the SUV pulled up beside the victims' car on the right. Aaron Hernandez then fired a .38-caliber revolver multiple times from the driver's side of his vehicle into the passenger side of the victims' vehicle," Conley said.

Say 'I don't' to these 5

Etiquette. Wedding season is in full bloom, and serial guest Jen Doll wants you to learn from her mistakes.

Before you spend money on a dress you'll never wear again, before you scroll down the list of wedding registry gifts just looking for something in your price range, and before you weed through your list of Facebook friends for someone hot enough you can ask to be your date (without it being too weird), read these tips from Jen Doll, author of "Save the Date." She's been to more than her fair share of weddings, has seen it all and is here to save you from any wedding guest mortification you are unknowingly setting yourself up for.

2 CULTURE

Open bar no-no

Don't do shots

The open bar isn't going to shut down, so there's no need to start the day with tequila shots. When it comes to boozing it up at a wedding, take it slow. Doll has a whole section in her book devoted to the dangers of the open bar, so learn from her mistakes.

Don't wear painful shoes, even if they're pretty

Weddings are long. "You're going to be standing, dancing and just generally spending a lot of time on your feet, so wearing shoes that are going to make you want to kill yourself after five minutes is not a good idea," Doll advises. When it comes to the rest of the outfit, her advice is to wear something you feel confident in. "It's nice to go to a wedding feeling good about yourself and good about the relationship you're there to support," she says.

Don't bring a date just so you're not alone

There are definitely times when you should bring a date to a wedding, like when you're married or dating someone your friends like having around. But there are times when it's better to go solo, even when you'd rather not. "If you're going to be seeing a lot of old friends and it's like a reunion, it might be best to go alone," Doll explains. You don't want to be stuck explaining who every person you name-drop is to your date, who will probably be bored anyway. "Also, if you just started dating someone new, it's best to go by yourself," she says.

One last piece of wedding advice: Do NOT be these guys! / RICHARD CARTWRIGHT, NEW LINE CINEMA wedding faux pas

Jen Doll shares her wedding guest memories — even the ones she wishes she could forget — in "Save the Date." / SARAH SHATZ

"You don't want to push a new relationship and make it seem more real than it is."

Another time when it's best not to bring a date: right after a breakup. "It can be scary to go alone, but use that time to do something nice for yourself," Doll says. Get a blowout. If it's a destination wedding, stay a little longer. Use the wedding as an excuse to indulge.

Don't make out with anyone related to the bride

"If you're single, you can flirt or make out with anyone you are attracted to who is also single ... as long as they aren't a relative of the bride," she says. Let Doll, who has seen her fair share of disastrous wedding hook-ups — and even had some of her own — save you from doing something you'll regret the next day. "The price is too great, with the awkwardness and potential apologies waiting to be made," she warns.

That goes for the catering staff, too

Even if the hottest people at the reception are the ones keeping your wine glass full, Doll says it's best not to flirt with the wait staff. "They're there to serve you, so they have to be nice to you. It's a bit ungenerous to put them in that spot," she says. If it really seems like true love, Doll recommends exchanging digits and hanging out at a later date.

Celebrity weddings

The stars are aligned

Everybody knows what celebrities they share their birthdays with, but by reading this you can know which celebrities your friends may share their anniversaries with.

1 May 25 If we're to believe the invitation that leaked online, Kim Kardashian and Kanye West are getting married next Saturday. But really, who's to say that's not a red herring. They may be getting married as you read this.

2 July 4 weekend Jessica Simpson and Eric Johnson were engaged four years ago and were originally going to wed on the island of Capri, but the couple scrapped that to do something more American. Not only are they getting married in the States — to avoid friends and family from RSVPing regrets to a destination wedding — but they're reportedly getting hitched on or around Independence Day.

3 Sept. 20 Reports suggest that George Clooney and Amal Alamuddin will marry in Quebec City in September.

4 "Fall" Former star of "The Hills" and multi-hyphenate Lauren Conrad is marrying lawyer William Tell in the fall. The official date has not been made public. (Read: We weren't invited and nobody in the media has leaked it yet.)

5 "Sometime this year?" Mila Kunis and Ashton Kutcher are expecting a baby "sometime this year," she told Ellen DeGeneres last week, but they haven't even mentioned a vague time frame for their nuptials. METRO

Floating down the avenue

Kinetic. The annual funky fest and derby take over Kensington on Saturday.

Get all the details at TrentonAveArtsFest.org. / SEAN BOLTON

Travel down "a really funky street" Saturday during the Kensington Kinetic Sculpture Derby, part of East Kensington Neighbors Association's annual Trenton Avenue Arts Festival. The fest — which features hundreds of food and craft vendors, live music and hands-on activities for the kids — brings together neighbors in Kensington, Fishtown and Port Richmond (or really any Philadelphians who want to see what all the hype is about). Fest coordinator Justin Russell describes the area as not only funky, but having "an old feel with new developments."

"This festival is a branding statement. Our signature event," Russell says.

The derby is a mix of old and new too: Floats can be as wild, wacky and futuristic as participants want to make them, but there's a catch. They have to run entirely on "human power" — no motors allowed to make them chug along the route that begins at Trenton Avenue and Norris Street and goes through several obstacle courses, including hills and a mud pit.

"It represents sustainability, art and the neighborhood, because everything is made here in Philadelphia," says Joanna Winchester of the New Kensington Community Development Corporation, which organizes the derby. The NKCDC also hosts workshops to teach eager participants just how one goes about building a giant moving sculpture that can glide through a mud pit (hint: bicycles play a role).

Eight floats participated in the first Kensington Kinetic Sculpture Derby in 2007; last year there were 28. Judges, including politicians, local business owners and, for the People's Choice Awards, community members, are looking for the most creative entries.

Quoted

"If people aren't befuddled when they come to the festival, then we haven't done our job."
Justin Russell

Welcome back, trodder

Monster reboot.
Godzilla returns, only he's serious, and his co-star is Juliette Binoche.

Director Gareth Edwards puts horrible beasts in the background of shots throughout "Godzilla." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

These are times when we prefer our cultural junk gloomy and realistic. Even "Leprechaun" is getting a "dark" reboot. But it makes sense for Godzilla. The 1954 original is brutal and brooding, not campy like the film versions that followed. Despite being so serious in tone, however, the new one doesn't have the drive of the first, which symbolically exorcised the demons of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, only nine years before.

But even if there's no burning reason it needs to exist, this "Godzilla" at least has craft. It's sometimes disarming how adept it is at doing something atypical. It's an origin story, following the paths of a pair of winged behemoths, as well as the title mega-reptile himself, who decide to use the planet's urban pockets as their battlegrounds.

Its focus is tight, even narrow, sometimes to a fault. Its characters aren't interesting, despite an overqualified cast that includes Bryan Cranston, Sally Hawkins and Juliette Binoche. But that's by design. This is a detached sort of blockbuster: The cameras keeps us far from the action, denying us clear shots of its creatures, and even cuts away from fights just as they get big. But stick with it, because it does, eventually, deliver the monster-fighting goods.

Sports saga. Jon Hamm's baseball movie is not a 'Bull Durham'

"Million Dollar Arm" tells of how Dinesh Patel and Rinku Singh, two kids from India, were found after an exhaustive search and installed in the MLB. It's an interesting true story, if perhaps not worthy of an entire movie. And so the film attaches a more formulaic storyline: that of a workaholic — in this case sports agent J.B. Bernstein (Jon Hamm) — who learns to chill out, care about people with whom he's not doing business and not exclusively bang shallow models.

There's only one way this is going to go, and that's not a bad thing; films like this are essentially comfort food. But the script so heavily favors J.B.'s tale that all else falls by the wayside. That includes Patel and Singh (Madhur Mittal and Suraj Sharma), as well as excitable aspiring coach Amit (Pitobash). Ostensibly the focus of the story, they get one personality tic each. They're even reduced to those dumb jokes about rural types not understanding the basics of "civilized" culture, like how one doesn't go up the down escalator. Good thing Lake Bell is there. As Hamm's love interest, she brings an unusual, fun energy to a film that needs as much personality as it can get. MATT PRIGGE

Lake Bell is known for comic acting, in "It's Complicated" and "No Strings Attached," as well as for writing, directing and starring in last year's "In a World..." But "Million Dollar Arm" producer Joe Roth likens his casting of her as Jon Hamm's love interest in the true baseball tale to when he cast an unknown Sandra Bullock in "While You Were Sleeping" nearly 20 years ago.

"She's got a great career in front of her," Roth says. So, no pressure, right Lake?

Clearly when you think sports movie or Disney

"Million Dollar Arm" producer Joe Roth calls the actress and filmmaker the next Sandra Bullock.

"Jon [Hamm] and I are lucky because we've been pals for such a long time." Bell movie, the first name that comes to your mind is Lake Bell.

Thank you. By the way, correct. You are right. I am, like, the go-to. [Laughs] That's me.

I was actually wondering, after Joe Roth made the Sandra Bullock comparison at today's press conference, if you're feeling any extra career pressure already.
I was like, "Damn, Joe." We'll see how that plays out. [Laughs] No, I was hugely flattered, just because obviously I love Sandra Bullock and she's fantastic. I love her both personally and her work. But no, I don't feel any pressure. I think he might feel pressure now. I'm like, "So, what are we doing? What's the next deal? Let's get some 'Speed' money." [Laughs] But no, it was hugely complimentary.

You have such a great, easy time riffing with Jon Hamm.
Jon and I are lucky because we've been pals for such a long time, though this is the first time that we got to do a movie together. We do "Children's Hospital," but he just rolls in when he wants to for an episode here or there while we're doing the show. This was fun because we were on equal ground in scenes and got to sink our teeth into something. But yeah, I think that kind of banter we both enjoy.

In her own hands

Behind the lens

How do you scout out acting work around your own projects?
The good news for me is that it takes a while to procure a project that you're going to direct. After "In a World..." first came out, there was a barrage of opportunities, and that's a beautiful, profound thing — especially coming out of something that you bore yourself. It's moving to think, "Oh my God, this really changed my life, and I did it for myself."

You don't feel any sort of deadline pressure from other people on your team?
I put my own deadlines to myself. I have the luxury of being an actor first and foremost, so it makes writing still fun for me because the deadlines are a little looser. I prefer to take my time and make it awesome than rush into it because somebody's going to forget my name as a director. It's not worth it.

Salmoning is safer for cyclists

I hate to disappoint all of you who try to hate on Alec Baldwin, but it's much SAFER and smarter for a bicyclist to ride AGAINST traffic, regardless of what our chauffeur-driven-in-an SUV politicians say. Would you rather your opponent always be BEHIND you or in FRONT of you? And all the cyclists who died from being "doored" would be alive if only they had been riding against traffic. And any honest adult admits the "disorderly conduct" charge is a scam by cops to use against anyone they don't like. Creating a crowd equals disorderly conduct? Then all cops are guilty of it every time they do their jobs.
JACK DICKENSON, VIA EMAIL

Would Dems be OK with the IRS on their backs?

The politicization of the IRS and other government agencies since Obama took office is unprecedented in U.S. history, and quite frankly, it's dangerous for our democracy. I ask this of those on the left who are opposed to conservatives and therefore don't care what the IRS is doing: When the Republicans are back in power, will you be OK with this?

Sixers have a lot riding on the NBA Draft Lottery

NBA. The Sixers can set themselves on the right course for a long time with one lucky draw.

Now that the debris has cleared from the 76ers' maddening 19-63 regular season, it's time to focus on the future.

The future is now, or more specifically, May 20.

That's when the NBA Draft Lottery takes place in New York City.

The Bucks finished at 15-67, the worst record in the league, and have a 25 percent chance of getting the No. 1 pick. The Sixers have the second-best chance at the top pick with a 19.9 percent chance. The Magic (23-59) have the third-best shot at the No. 1 pick at 15.6 percent.

Will the Sixers have the chance to bring Jabari Parker to Philadelphia? / GETTY IMAGES

If the Sixers finish with the top pick, it will be their first since 1996 when they entered the lottery with the second-best chance following an 18-64 season. The pingpong balls landed their way, they wound up with the first pick, and it resulted in guard Allen Iverson.

In 2010, the Sixers entered the lottery in sixth, but came in second following the bounce of the pingpong balls, and that player ended up being guard Evan Turner.

In addition to the Sixers' pick, they also own the New Orleans Pelicans' pick, a by-product of a deal last year on draft night when they traded All-Star guard Jrue Holiday to the Pelicans. It's likely to be around No. 10.

ANDY JASNER

Top picks

Since the Sixers should have two of the top 10 players selected, here's a look at some of the best players available:

- Andrew Wiggins, Kansas — A tremendous all-around player who should get better at the next level.
- Joel Embiid, Kansas — He's a dynamic player but is his back healthy?
- Jabari Parker, Duke — Probably the most-ready NBA player.
- Julius Randle, Kentucky — Already possesses an NBA body and looks like a double-double machine.
- Dante Exum, Australia — Huge upside and could step in right away to lead a team.

Allen Iverson

The 76ers hit the jackpot when they won the lottery in 1996 when they selected Georgetown's Allen Iverson first overall.

On his hall-of-fame résumé with the Sixers are four scoring titles, an NBA MVP award, Rookie of the Year honors, and 11 straight All-Star game appearances. Iverson was the face of the franchise in South Philly for over a decade, and ushered in an era of winning, leading the Sixers to an NBA Finals appearance in 2001.

There is little doubt he has set the bar a mile high when it comes to Philadelphia draft selections.

Evan Turner

Traded to Indiana just this season, the swingman was taken No. 2 in the 2010 NBA draft, but never panned out in Philly.

Andre Iguodala

The Sixers got almost nine seasons from the Arizona product, taken No. 9 overall in 2004, and an All-Star in 2012.

Playing the lottery

Some Sixers lottery picks have changed the landscape of the franchise. Some have been complete duds.

EVAN MACY
evan.macy@metro.us

Keith Van Horn

Van Horn was taken No. 2 in 1997 and sent to the Nets for Tim Thomas and Anthony Parker.

Clarence Weatherspoon

The forward was taken No. 9 overall in 1992 as a replacement for the departed Charles Barkley.

Jerry Stackhouse

The Sixers took UNC's Stackhouse with the No. 3 pick in 1995. Four season later he was gone.

Larry Hughes

Hughes was drafted No. 8 overall in 1998 and then shipped off to Golden State three years later.

Slumping Phils host Reds this weekend

MLB. The Phillies return to National League play looking to leave interleague woes behind them.

For the most part, the Phillies offense was held in check in two interleague games against the Los Angeles Angels this week.

Maybe Thursday's day off will help jumpstart the offense, which fell 4-3 on Tuesday and was shutout 3-0 on Wednesday.

The Phillies were also set back by some defensive lapses, most notably multiple errors by third baseman Cody Asche that wound up costing Cliff Lee a win in what was an otherwise solid start.

The Phillies could be getting the perfect opponent to help end the mini-slump this weekend as the equally offensively challenged Cincinnati Reds come to town.

The Reds are ranked 28th in the major leagues in runs scored and 23rd in batting average.

If the Phillies' makeshift bullpen can get into gear to help the solid starting efforts of Lee, Kendrick and Hamels, the Phillies could find themselves closer to the .500 mark by the end of this three-game set.

Cole Hamels really needs to rebound Saturday against the Reds. / GETTY IMAGES

Probable starters

The Phillies host the Reds this weekend and need to get their offense back on track.

- Friday: Alfredo Simon (4-2, 2.89 ERA) vs. Kyle Kendrick (0-3, 3.98 ERA)
- Saturday: Homer Bailey (3-2, 4.72 ERA) vs. Cole Hamels (0-2, 5.32 ERA)
- Sunday: To be announced vs. Cliff Lee (3-4, 3.23 ERA)

MLB. Utley continues to play with intensity, help Phillies contend

Chase Utley leads the Phillies in a bevy of stat categories. / GETTY IMAGES

The Phillies haven't had a spectacular season through their first 38 games at 17-21.

But Chase Utley has.

The 35-year-old second baseman still has a team-best batting average of .343.

He has three triples, three homers, 20 RBIs and boasts an impressive .571 slugging percentage.

"You know what? He's driving the ball and having quality at-bats," Phillies manager Ryne Sandberg said. "He just continues to swing a hot bat for us."

His three triples, along with 17 doubles lead the National League.

Utley also has seven go-ahead hits, showing that his timely hitting in the middle of the order is more than just for the stat books; it helps the Phillies win games.

It seems his hot hitting has rubbed off a bit on his mid-order teammates.

Marlon Byrd is hitting at a .295 clip in the No. 5 spot, and Ryan Howard looks more comfortable at the plate as he collects more and more opposite-field hits. His average is up to .251. EVAN MACY

Help is on the way

Ruf officially taken off the disabled list

The Phillies have been missing a certain amount of pop in their lineup, and perhaps Darin Ruf will be able to provide it soon.

The Phillies took him off the disabled list, where he has been since spring training, and assigned him to Triple-A Lehigh Valley on Thursday.

The Phillies could really use Ruf's right-handed power. / GETTY IMAGES

The only reason he wasn't called up to the major leagues was due to his shortened stint in Single-A Clearwater. The slugging first baseman and outfielder needs some more at-bats before he will be deemed big-league ready. EVAN MACY
